Shipping IT Equipment to... MEXICO

Challenge

Our client, a US-based global IT management company, had to deliver specialized IT equipment to their customer's office in Mexico City. Without an import license or business entity, they needed a full service supply chain provider to properly import the specialized equipment into Mexico on their behalf.

Process

Local Collection

Our local team collected the shipment at our client's facility and soft-wrapped the devices for transport back to our warehouse.

Manifest + Full Document Support

The shipment was pre-verified with Mexican customs standards and all documents were procured according to local customs requirements.

Direct Transport to Mexico City

Once packed for safe transport, the shipment was sent on a direct flight to Mexico City arriving in 2 days.

Importer of Record Service

FGX's trading company imported the shipment on behalf of the client as they didn't have a business entity in Mexico.

Custom Clearance

Our brokerage presented all import documents to complete the customs clearance process.

Final Delivery

Delivery was scheduled with the local Mexico City office. Final delivery was completed on schedule.

Shipments headed to Mexico from the U.S. must go through the pre-validation procedure. The process starts when our team pre-validates the shipment by verifying the shipment contents against the commercial invoice by pulling all serial numbers off each device. Once all the import paperwork is finalized, a customs inspection is scheduled with customs officials. If everything is properly prepared the shipment will pass the customs clearance procedure smoothly.

Result

FGX was able to handle the entire logistics process from local collection to final delivery. Our team of Mexican customs specialists were able to handle the shipment effortlessly through the customs clearance process allowing for an expedited clearance timeline.

The client was able to procure their hardware in the USA and seamlessly ship it to Mexico, saving both time and money.
